Antibiotic resistance: Have the bugs won? Is a way possible beyond winning and losing?

'Vibrant voices of doctors and vets, and even microbes themselves, will lay out the tense biomedical drama of antibiotic resistance emerging in clinics and communities here and around the world. A short film will explore the link between how we think about war on microbes and how we use antibiotics in this war. The health of ecosystems is at stake here.

Participate in a dialogue to explore the medical and scientific facts and the social and political impacts of antibiotic resistance!

What are your personal and ecological views about how we might respond to a real medical threat such as multi-drug resistant infections, yet better live with microbes? How can we build a healthy ecosystem?
